The Memary of the Heart.

A Kind Deed Never Dies.

Blest be the hand that for a child prepares
A simple pleasure!
In after years it springs amid life's cares
A blooming treasure.

A poor lad stood, with tattered garments clothed
And shoeless feet;
Beside a wooden paling that enclosed
A garden neat.

With longing eyes he gazed upon the flowers
Blossoming there,
In the still brightness of the Sabbath hours
And dewy air.

Forth from his humble cot the owner came—
A wood-cutter was he—
To deck his button-hole for church his aim,
With sweet anemone.

He saw the boy, and from his blooming store
He chose with care;
A bright carnation to the child he bore,
Of all most rare.

No word was said, but home with bounding
Hastened the boy; [tread
His bright eye glisten'd as he onward sped
With grateful joy.

* * * * * * * *

Long years have pass'd, and o'er that youthful
So beauteous then, [brow,
The frosts of age have graven, gently, now
Three score and ten.

The flower hath long since faded, but again
Afresh it blooms,
And casts, midst memories of grief and pain,
Its sweet perfumes.

'Tis ever thus: a kind deed never dies,
Though undeserved;
Within the casket of the heart it lies,
By God preserved!

Faint Sketches of Men of Our Day.

NO. V.—GEN. POPE.

Many of us remember how, just after the election of Abraham Lincoln, a certain Public Functionary in one of his most virulent moods, travelled a long way out of what was then supposed to be his road, in his desire to punish a captain in the regular army whose dull perception failed to perceive the beauties afforded in a moral and personal contemplation of the Public Functionary above mentioned. Perhaps the incident has totally escaped the memory of the reader? but the writer remembers it as well as yesterday. The captain was arrested upon a very plausable pretext. He was absent from his post. He was "absent without leave." I trust there is none so dull now-a-days but that they thoroughly understand that, with the evidences around them. And most of us can form some idea of the objects arrived at by the absentees. Some resort to the cities for good cheer; some are eternally in search of cheap liquor, and a quiet place to drink it in; some are caught by women's eyes, and (it is hinted), some are averse to the sound of bullets and balls. But the captain alluded to did not have time to devote to either women or liquor, and went directly in the way of danger. How, then was he occupied? "Thereby hangs a tale." There had been indications of a great storm, which people predicted would devastate the country, in all probability, and of a surity would cause the death of a man to whom the captain conceived himself under an obligation. There was just enough of a rift in the clouds to enable a man to pick his steps, and the captain felt bound to guide his chosen friend safe through the tempest. And solely because of his allegiance to his chosen friend, and not because he had deprived any other of a little of respect or good will, James Buchanan arrested him. The act was a mean one, I would say incomparably mean did I not bethink me of James Buchanan's actions before and since, so that I will only add, except in the actions of James Buchanan. J. B. however felt ashamed of it himself a day or two afterwards, and graciously permitted the captain to resume his duties, at which all Cincinnati gave way to a hearty gufflaw the echoes of which vibrated from Maine to California. And the gallant captain modestly stepped off about his business after making a neat little speech, in which he still proclaimed his love for Abraham Lincoln.

Now, if any one asserts that I have exagerated a fact, let them prove it. Suppose, for a moment that Captain Pope did neglect some trifling duty for a day or two, bear in mind that Cincinnati, and the United States property in that city would not suffer a loss of an eagle, at its present value, thereby; was it not known that threats had been uttered against the President elect, that danger lay in his path to the capital, and to the safe occupation of the Presidential chair? and what would be expected of President Lincoln were it possible for such a contingency to occur again? Precisely what was expected of James Buchanan; but not only did he not afford his successor a safe guard; but, if anything, added to his perils, and arrested those who deemed themselves bound to enforce right and the law. Never did an act of a man in power resemble the blind and futile thrusts of a copperhead more than did the last public acts of the now universally detested James Buchanan. My only wonder is that the virus left him a single good eye.

I do not remember that I ever heard of John Pope before Lincoln's election; but the incident I have recalled created a very favorable opinion of the captain in the minds of many, and since then I have never forgotten him. When he became famous, I was moved by the common desire (in the army) to behold the only man who had given evidence to the world that there not only really was such a thing as a bag for the capture of an army—we had all come to laugh at the very mention of the word;— but that he knew how to make it. My curiosity was satisfied at the siege of Corinth. My duty and inclination led me to his quarters often, and if any one should inquire what I saw there more than at any other General's quarters, I should first answer that I saw GENERAL POPE! Secondly, I saw the finest system, more method and better order than I observed at any other general's quarters, which, you may be assured, is saying very much. Thirdly, I had the pleasure of hearing him express many original ideas; for, let his enemies say what they will, they cannot deny that he is an original man. Every one remembers his position there, on the left. Well, his guns were the first guns that looked into the muzzles of the enemies'; his parallel was the first that raised its crest before the besieged, where the rebels looked at our men, and ours looked at them, when the rest of our works, like theirs had to be conjectured.

He it was who proposed looking over the tree tops, if possible, down into the town, splicing two trees together for that purpose, from which the signal corps beheld the house tops and spires. In short, he exerted a great influence over everything and everybody—always excepting General Halleck. He absorbed all the inventive genius and resources before Corinth. His resources! they were wonderful and inexhaustable. Gen. Willich said there was "no end to his resources." I have counted nineteen Generals at his quarters, all drawn there to talk to him and to hear him talk. And I once heard him sketch out, while smoking his cigar, a plan for the Generals in the East, which he afterwards put into practice there, with scarcely a modification. That was in the presence of seven Generals, three of whom the world now call able. Little did they think that their favorite would be called to a field only to experience insult, where his friends could not turn aside the shafts of jealousy, hatred and envy that were aimed at him openly and under cover, unceasingly until they accomplished their purpose. Is it necessary to mention these things? Or is there any man among us who has read the testimony and still shakes his head when Gen. Pope's capacity is discussed? "O! he is a braggart!" I know what you allude to very well; and yet I would ask you if you do not find in history great and successful warriors who fell into the same habit? But, will you account to me for one very singular fact: why did Gen. Halleck send on that 25,000 story in such great haste, and without pausing to inquire into its truth or falsity, when four hours' ride would have set any doubts at rest forever? Or, do you begin to think that, since that was the case, and Halleck so completely foiled in the mysterious evacuation (to him) of the rebels, perhaps he and Pope——there, suppose we say nothing about it, and that you think twice before you call Pope a braggart.

History will one day set many of these things right, besides, for aught I may know, you may be influenced by an idea that was expressed to me not very long ago, to the effect that there "was nothing in Pope, and that he owed his position and fame to the fact that his family was immensely wealthy, and one of the first and most influential in the State (Kentucky), &c., &c." For if you do think so, I, being an American, consider all that sort of stuff scarcely worth replying to, and an insult to the Government, the men who represent us in arms and diplomacy, and those who deliberately select them.

Gen. Pope's history is pretty well known to the world now. His victories over the most skillful of the rebels, and the victory of a certain well known clique over him, are all pretty generally known by those who possess any intelligence. He has been abused most heartily, and, for a time successfully, but the truth is working its way up to the surface all the more surely for its slowness; and when it does become apparent to all, several towering reputations will sink as rapidly as a punctured balloon. Philosophers and students of human nature generally may then contemplate a fresh illustration of an old subject.

There is a finely finished photograph of Gen. Pope, of the usual card size, to be found in almost any dealer's shop. There is a small steel engraving of him which is still better; but the stone and wood cuts are simply untrue. There is nothing remarkable in the General's appearance. About medium height, weighing, say one hundred and fifty or sixty pounds, very compactly built, quick, easy and graceful in his movements, at home everywhere, never disconcerted, remarkably self-possessed and calm, he looks and acts like a man thoroughly acquainted with the world. He is plain in dress; uses very plain language, and goes at once to the point. He is eminently practical. His personal appearance is pleasing. Straight black hair and beard, fine large forehead, rather square; black eyes, mouth indicating resolution and decision, dark complexion, general cast of features thoughtful. Such is the outer appearance of Major-General John Pope.

A Fresh Chapter of History--What Governor Curtin did in April, 1861.

The Philadelphia Press furnishes the following in reference to an important event in the history of the war:

"When the red hand of rebellion was raised against the Government, the people of the country were apalled. The nation, so to speak, was apparently powerless for a time. Our ships-of-war had been sent to distant waters. Our arsenals and forts in the North had either been robbed or relieved of their little garrisons. The small army of two thousand five hundred regulars had been sent South, under the command of the meanest of traitors, General Twiggs, by the order of the band of conspirators, who, though solemnly sworn to support the Constitution, were plotting to overthrow it. The country then was filled with gloom. President Lincoln had very recently been sworn into his high and responsible position, surrounded as he was then by a few armed soldiers and patriotic citizens, who sprang to such arms as they could readily obtain. Treason flaunted its red flag all over Washington at that period. It was then that President Lincoln called around him the governors of the loyal States to advise with them on the desperate nature of the emergency.

"They met in the White House. 'Gentlemen,' said the President to the little party of patriotic men, 'the machinery of the nation is out of order. We must run it as we find it. Its wheels, its rods and belts are separated, but the boiler seems to be perfect. We must repair the work with such skill and ingenuity as we possess. There is wisdom in council, and therefore I have called you that we may reason together. What shall we do to crush out this foul rebellion and preserve the country from wreck? I have made up my mind, with an implicit confidence in an overruling Providence, to meet all emergencies that may arise. It is time to work,' continued the President. 'What shall I do about issuing a proclamation to the people?'

"The President, with his hands folded behind his back, paced up and down the apartment. The six or seven governors who formed his auditors, were wrapped in meditation. Each expressed his opinion, but their sentences were punctuated with too many "ifs or ands."

"While all this was going on Governor Curtin, fresh from his Pennsylvania home, was standing at the window, looking through the panes, upon which he was drumming with his fingers, while at the same time he was humming "Hail Columbia." He was an attentive listener to all that was going on. He had not yet been approached by the President. Presently there was profound silence.

"Mr.. Lincoln finally broke the silent spell, and turning to Mr. Curtin, said, 'Andy, what will Pennsylvania do if I issue my proclamation?'

"Silence still more profound prevailed. It was a momentous question. It seemed as if the fate of the country depended upon the reply about to be made.

"'Governor Curtin, still drumming on the panes with his fingers as aforesaid, turned, faced the President, and with uplifted hands, said:

"'What will Pennsylvania do?' Here he paused.

"'Do!' another pause.

"'Why, sir, (with emphasis) if you issue your proclamation Pennsylvania will furnish you a hundered thousand men in a week.'

"'Give me your hand, Andy,' said the President. and, as he convulsively grasped the same, he ejaculated: 'Thank God for that reply. I will at once issue my proclamation.'

"The gloom that shrouded that conclave of men on the instant passed away; hope revived the drooping spirits, the governors sprang to their feet and with one accord congratulated Mr. Curtin.

"The Governor of Pennsylvania telegraphd the fact of the forthcoming proclamation to the capitol of the State, from which it radiated to all parts. It was announced on the newspaper bulletin boards in Philadelphia, before the ink of the document was dry, and thus the yeoman population of the old Keystone were aroused to wholesome enthusiasm.

"Two battery companies, of Reading and Pottsville, on the receipt of Governor Curtin's dispatch, 'called the roll' at once, and the next train bore them to the defence of the capital of the nation. We well remember when those hardy men from the interior, some even in their shirt sleeves, passed through Philadelphia and took the cars at Broad and Prime streets. They arrived in Washington so quickly, that the bloody-minded traitors that surrounded the patriot President, and had Washington within their grasp, were struck with astonishment upon the sudden appearance of the batteries. They thougbt they had been deceived. They were seized with the idea that Pennsylvania was at once ready for the emergency. The foul conspirators were paralyzed from their own fears.

"The next day the famous Massachusetts Sixth, the Washington Brigade, of Philadelphia, passed through Baltimore, when a murderous outrage was committed, and the first loyal blood was spilled; then followed the New York Seventh; then came the Massachusetts Eighth. The capital of the nation was saved, much to the surprise of the conspirators and to the gratification of the loyal people of the country.

THE GRAVE OF DOUGLAS.—Journals in different parts of the country are copying the subjoining paragraph from a letter written by somebody of Boston from this city:

I went out of the city limits the other day and saw the grave of Stephen A. Douglas. He is buried upon the lake shore, in a beautiful spot. There is no monument erected over him with name or history; a simple mound, with a wooden fence around it, tells where Douglas lies. The city of Chicago is spreading in its limits every day. In a comparatively short time the grave of Douglas will be covered by houses of business, and the man who, in his day of pride and honor, was a dictator in the Congress of the nation, will not have a stone to mark his last resting place. "What shadows we are! What shadows we pursue!"

This letter writer has drawn his eloquence altogether from his fancy. He did not know that measures have been taken, through legislative action, that if rightly managed, will insure the building of an appropriate monument over the grave of Douglas in the course of a few years.—Chicago Post.

The Pittsburgh Press.

An old resident of our Smoky City, on picking up the first number of the Commercial, without knowing us, or we him, writes the following criticism on Journalism in this latitude. We shall endeavor to profit by his hints, and will make an earnest effort to issue such a journal as absent Pittsburghers may be proud of. All we ask in return is that our Manufacturers and Merchants shall continue to second our efforts in the way of substantial support.

The appearance of a new paper in Pittsburgh is hailed with pleasure by every one who takes an interest in the welfare of that old fogy, but delightfully substantial and comfortable city, in the fond hope that at last there will be what has been so long greatly needed, a real, live, enterprising journal. By a very cursory glance at the files of papers issued west of the Alleghanies, it will be seen that Pittsburgh is far behind its younger sister cities, and that many of them, far behind her in size, wealth and importance, can boast of larger, handsomer, better conducted, better filled, more influential, more widely circulated and more enterprising papers.

What business man in Pittsburgh does not feel this as every day he takes up his home papers and finds a-half column of a leader, in which the views of the editor are merely those of some one of his exchanges, re-dressed, numerous cuttings from eastern sheets that he has himself read the day before, and another three-quarter column of local matter in two, three, and four line paragraphs? How often is there an editorial that is worth the short time occupied in reading it—in which paper, edited in your city, does there appear any original, independent, readable articles—and how often do they appear,—in what exchanges are they ever noticed?

If the residents find the city papers so uninteresting what encouragement is there for those Pittsburghers who are scattered throughout every State and Territory to subscribe for them? Truly but little—and yet all who have lived in the good old city feel a pride in her, an interest in her welfare, and sincere desire for her advancement and prosperity. Should the Commercial be an improvement in her cotemporaries, and stimulate them to even a little exertion and a little ambition, we will wish the Commercial every success; and without knowing who are the editors, or caring what their politics, assure them, they will be benefactors and benefitted.

Do not think that we write in a spirit of fault-finding; such is not the object. Will any candid Pittsburgher deny the truth of statements made?—and do not all hope that there will be a change for the better? We have lived away from the city for some six or seven years and have taken the different papers, but have been compelled to give them up one by one and invest in other papers where we can get some little value received.

A Little Romance for the Hot Weather.

Among the saunterers in the Ramble, says a writer for the New York Courier, I had often noticed a youthful, spirituelle, very girlish in manner and appearance, which flashed upon me with the suddenness of one of Professor Pepper's ghosts from some sharp turn or angle in that delightful promenade. The lady was attired in the deepest mourning, and her features wore that air of superhuman loveliness which one sometimes sees in old paintings of the Madonna. She was never accompanied—always alone—and appeared to be possessed by a settled melancholy, which rendered her a thousand times more interesting in the eyes of the frequenters, some of whom began to notice her with marked attention.

Her apparent want of friends by degrees attracted the sympathy of a romantic young scion of the upper ten, who, having more time than he knew what to do with, was energentically cultivating the Park. Open to all outside impressions, the soul of this chivalrous youth was soon impregnated with a passion for the fair unknown which grew all the more intense from the fact that it had nothing more tangible than an image to feed upon. For weeks our Strephon haunted the paths she frequented, growing daily and hourly thinner with corroding thought. No prospect appeared of obtaining the desired introduction; the lady was distant as ever, and cold, withal, as an icicle. He doubted whether she had noticed him, and yet, with such marked observation as he had bestowed upon her, such blindness seemed hardly possible. At last the fates relented. One afternoon, during the performance of one of Dodworth's waltzes, the eyes of the fair unknown encountered his.

Observing his regards, she rose, and with a melancholy smile, led the way to the Ramble. Strephon followed, at that respectful distance prescribed by the rules of ordinary politeness. In a remote corner of the Maize he found her again. She was seated on a bench, and was observed in pensive memory, her cheek leaning upon her jeweled hand, as pale as that of a statue. "Now's the time, if ever," thought Strephon, as he plumped himself down by his inamorata. A hap hazard remark, respecting the romantic loveliness of the spot, elicited a brief response and a heavy sigh. "What a sigh was there!" quoth Strephon, "surely some secret grief, some irremediable sorrow, must underlie so profound a melancholy. If my humble endeavor might cause a blush to come upon that cheek." &c., &c. He had studied it from the latest fashionable novel, and had not miscalculated the effect. The lady was both flustered and flattered, but the manner and appearance of Strephon were so much in his favor that she could not feel otherwise than flattered at such attentions.

The unknown was an heiress in her own right, residing with her parents in a fine brown stone front, in one of the avenues adjacent. Her story was a sad one. At an early stage of the war she had bestowed her affections upon a noble youth who had unfortunately taken service in the rebel army. An only brother commanded one of the regiments of the opposite side. During a recent engagement these two had come in collision, and the sword of the brother had drank her Theodore's blood. This was why she was so sad; this was why she haunted the Ramble and the Mall with such persevering assiduity, since she had once delighted to stray with the object of her affections. "Excuse me, sir," she added, "but you look so like Theodore."

Now she has described Theodore as being very handsome, and, encouraged by this compliment, the youth ventured to offer his arm for a stroll. The intimacy thus began resulted in an invitation to the parental mansion. Pa and Ma were absent at Newport, but she thought there could be no possible objection to

The Daily Commercial.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1863.

Publication Office, 72 and 74 Fifth Street, (2d Floor) Opposite Postoffice.

PUBLISHED BY The Commercial Printing Co.

The Post of yesterday morning departs from its accustomed courtesy to make a coarse attack on Hon. THOS. J. BIGHAM. It assumes that Mr. B. is the editor of the Commercial, and charges him with writing a fulsome puff of himself. So far as the notice of Mr. B.'s speech in Philadelphia is concerned, he was hundreds of miles away from the city when it was written, and never saw it until he read it in this paper. Besides, the Post is lacking in conventional etiquette when it goes behind the published title for a responsible name for the utterances of the Commercial. We have adopted the impersonal form of publication to eschew personality and vituperation—auxilliaries which have rendered the newspapers of Pittsburgh so bitter and distasteful. We have a score of contributors to our columns. No one mind, no matter how gifted or well stored, could furnish daily that variety and quality of original articles which the necessity of the age demands for a daily newspaper. We feel proud to claim Mr. Bigham as a contributor to our columns. As a statistician—a terse, bold and vigorous political writer—he has no superior in the western part of the State; while, at the same time, we avow as the policy of the management of the Commercial, that we intend to employ talent wherever it can be had, so that our columns will be enriched with contributions from the very first minds of the nation. We hope, therefore, that our cotemporaries will hereafter receive the articles which may appear in our journal as the utterances of the "Commercial," and not as the expression of individual opinions.

Gen. Butler at Harrisburg.

On Friday evening a mass meeting of the friends of Curtin and the Union was held at Harrisburg, at which speeches were made by our distinguished friend and fellow citizen, Hon. S. Cameron and Gen. B. F. Butler, of Mass, During his remarks, Mr. Cameron declared that "Governor Curtin must at present be the centre and embodiment of the loyalty of Pennsylvania. He must, therefore, be elected. I hope that if there is a man in the whole Commonwealth that has any personal feelings in regard to the nominee, he will bury them for the time. I am satisfied that if we fail to sustain Gov. Curtin and his measures, the country will suffer for it." This declaration of the distinguished statesman was received with tumultuous applause.

Gen. Butler succeeded Mr. Cameron in a truly Jacksonian speech, demonstrative of the principles of the great apostle of Democracy, and affirming his undying loyalty to his country. The eloquent and brave officer concluded his speech in the following words: "I am not for the Union as it was because it cannot be reconstructed. If we could bring the seceding States back into the Union in every respect, I would do it, but it cannot be done. Who can bring back the gallant dead on the banks of the Potomac, Rappahannock and Chickahominy? Who can wipe away the tears of the widow and the fatherless? Who can wipe out our national debt? Who can bring back the prosperity of 1860? After all that, then, I am with you for the reconstruction of the Union." The meeting then adjourned with cheers for Gen. Butler, Gen. Cameron and Gov. Curtin.

Rosecrans All Right.

We never for a moment lost faith in the Southwestern army, operating near Chattanooga. Not even when lying bulletins pretended to announce his ignominious defeat. The worst of the matter is that the text of the dispatches themselves did not warrant the startling headings. Now, when the excitement is over everybody admits that no telegrams were received warranting the announcement.

It is very probable that he has retired to Chattanooga until his reinforcements are concentrated. We do not believe the ridiculous stories that 140,000 rebels are concentrated in his front—no, nor the half of that. A fierce battle may be fought in a few days, but the rebels will be whipped—aye, badly whipped. The forces of Burnside and some of Grant's army will very soon be concentrated at Chattanooga. Then Bragg's army, be it 40,000 or 140,000, will be defeated. The demoralization of the rebel armies is too complete to allow of their defeating Rosecrans. We shall believe nothing else until we receive official dispatches from Rosecrans admitting his defeat.

The Aristocracy of Democracy.

N. B. Browne, former Senator, Postmaster, &c., under various Democratic regimes, was the chairman of the Philadelphia Union meeting, and as such alluded to the copperhead sympathies Judge Woodward habitually expresses in his general intercourse in society. Charles J. Biddle, chairman of the State Democratic committee, immediately writes him a note inquiring when he (Browne) had ever enjoyed the inestimable privilege of speaking to that great aristocrat, George W. Woodward. In fact Biddle almost says in so many words that no upstart plebian is ever permitted to touch the hem of the garment of the aristocratic George. That is a privilege only allowed to some dozen of the first families among the Democracy. The balance are mudsills that do very well to vote on election days, but Charlie turns up his aristocratic nose at the very idea that any save his own exclusive coterie are ever permitted to speak to so great a copperhead as George W. Woodward. No, no, they must not come between the wind and his nobility.

Mr. Burke paid a beautiful tribute to General McClellan, whom he styled the nation's idol; a second Washington, and the second savior of his country, destined to be our next President. [Prolonged cheering.]—The Post's report of a meeting in Allegheny City.

We beg leave to inform Mr. B. and our neighbor of the Post that Gen. McClellan makes no secret of his earnest desire that Andrew G. Curtin should be elected the next Governor of Pennsylvania. This second Washington has too much patriotism to endorse George W. Woodward's effort to run Pennsylvania on the side track of the Southern Confederacy. We know that Gen. McClellan has stated that if in Pennsylvania he would, vote and if need be, speak for Gov. Curtin.

FROM ROSECRANS'S ARMY.—We yesterday met a trustworthy and reliable gentleman, W. C. Benton, Esq., of Indiana, who left Rosecrans' front on Friday morning. Up to the time of his departure, no fighting except heavy skirmishing had taken place, although a bloody and decisive battle was hourly looked for. The two armies were confronting each other in the mountains near the Tennessee line, about thirty-five miles south of Chattanooga, and about he same distance from Rome, Georgia. General McCook's corps, forming the right wing of the grand army, was ordered on Friday morning to reinforce General Thomas, at Trenton. He says unless the order was countermanded they reached him on Friday night, as they had only 24 miles to go. He represents the rebel effective force at from seventy to eighty thousand. Gen. Rosecrans' army is strong enough for the impending trial, and the men of fine spirits and full of hope and buoyancy. He thinks it next to impossible for them to overcome the noble Rosecrans, who is alive to the importance of the situation, diligent, and ever watchful in his preparations to meet the awful approaching struggle. This statement infuses new hope into our hearts. He is, as stated above, a gentlemen of reliability and of sound judgment. We are fully convinced that what he says is truth and is to be implicitly relied upon.—Louisville Journal.

What Our Neighbors Think of Us.

The Pittsburgh Commercial—An ably managed, handsome, and spirited newspaper, entitled the Daily Commercial, has been started at Pittsburgh, Pa., and meets with much success, as the name indicates, it is a thorough business paper, and will commend itself more particularly to the mercantile portion of the community. At the same time, its well-filled columns include the latest news by telegraph, as well as literary and general matters. The Commercial is destined soon to rank among the most influential journals in the country, and we record the fact with the greatest pleasure because its influence will be exerted in behalf of the country's best interests.—Philadelphia Press.

The Pittsburgh Daily Commercial.—We have received several numbers of a new daily paper with the above title, recently started in Pittsburgh. It is the largest paper published in Western Pennsylvania. We have before us "No. 6," which already contains fifteen columns of advertising, showing its appreciation, as an advertising medium by the mercantile community in the midst of which it is located. It is decidedly and judiciously Republican, and ardently and intensely Curtin, as it should be. It is beautifully printed with bran new type and on an excellent quality of paper. Its selections are good because they are readable; and its editorials are so well written that we cannot conceive of the writer's necessity for concealing his name. It is published by a Company and edited by nobody in particular, that we know of—a grevious fault which will have to be corrected or fatal consequences will follow sooner or later. In short, it is a paper we can afford to exchange with, without charging the "difference."—Seth T. Hunt, Brownsville Clipper.

Pittsburgh Daily Commercial, is the title of a new daily paper published at Pittsburgh, Pa. It is beautifully printed, on good paper, is ably edited, and what is a still better recommendation, it is for the Union. It promises to be the best daily in Western Pennsylvania.—Tyrone Herald.

The Daily Commercial—We are in receipt of several numbers of a new daily bearing the above name, recently started in Pittsburgh. In politics it is Republican, and supports Curtin for Governor and Agnew for Supreme Judge. The paper is a model of neatness in mechanical execution, and displays talent in its whole composition. It promises to be independent, high-toned Republican paper; just such a paper as the Republican party of Allegheny county need. We admire a good thing, even in our political opponents. Its commercial department, which is its great feature, is worth the price of the paper to any business man, and for this alone, aside from its political features, will win its way to popular favor.—Kittanning Democrat.

New Daily in Pittsburgh—By our exchanges we note the advent of new daily paper in the city of Pittsburgh, styled the Daily Commercial. It is highly spoken of and we hope may be immediately and completely successful. We know of no city in the Union, in which there was, apparently, a better opening for a live, talented and wide-awake daily paper, and no city in which such a paper could exercise a more important and desirable influence We hope the Commercial may prove just such a paper as was needed, and shall be glad to receive its daily visitation.—Sandusky (O.) Register.

Judge Lowrie and the Commissioners.

Editors Commercial: In looking over a file of the True Press, I find an article over the signature of R. H. Kerr, Esq., a prominent Democratic politician, in reply to an impudent leader in the organ of the "bond holders," the Post. Mr. Kerr tartly stated Judge Lowrie to be the purest minded man that ever adorned the Bench, decided the subscriptions unconstitutional. To this opinion Judge Lowrie coincided. Since then he has turned Turk and outraged decency by his vulgar insolence when passing sentence on an old infirm man, worn down with disease, three hundred miles from his home, at an inclement season, and in a strange city. This man Lowrie remarked to poor old M'Elhenny "that he regretted that the Legislature has not given the Court the power to commit you to prison except in default of the payment of the fine, and of which the Court regrets. We fine you $1,000 and costs of prosecution, and order you into the custody of the sheriff when placed in the jail of Allegheny county, there to remain until the sentence be complied with. Now, you, sir, are guilty of one of the highest crimes known to this nation or this court, you are heading a rebellion, you have perjured yourself, you are under bad advisers; sit down, sir." The man who could give utterance to language of this nature after his own decision on the bond question, and apply it to a sick man, who in the performance of a sacred duty to his constituents, under a solemn pledge not to levy the tax—is a tyrant at heart, and the act of a coward; and should you, sir, justify such, you are no better. This was applied to Barr, of the Post. Will Mr. Kerr and his Democratic friends now support the "Tyrant" Lowrie? If party be so strong as to allow a departure from honesty by sustaining this demagogue, then indeed are men lost to all moral teachings. I am well satisfied that Col. Kerr will not vote for Judge Lowrie, nor will Major McElhenny, and there are others who spurn and loathe the man who will put the seal of condemnation on the ingrate who wantonly insulted our people by calling them "an armed mob," in the city of the bond holders. Allegheny county can defeat this upstart, who cost the taxables more than ten thousand dollars, by placing the Commissioners in Jail. Mark him now, that hereafter you may be clear of an enemy to the People.

GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.—The sales of 5 20's in Philadelphia yesterday amounted to $460,150.

DONE WELL.—The Maine Wesleyan Seminary has sent 400 of its students to the war. One hundred and fifteen went during one term.

Mrs. Partington is delighted that Prince Alfred would have nothing to do with Foreign Greece. She says she always thought he had better stick to his native Ile.

Prentice says when Humphrey Marshall was a rebel general he could never make up his mind to die in the last ditch, but he was often in a condition to fall into the first.

Lieutenant Frank Brownell, the "avenger of Ellsworth," and an officer in the Eleventh Regular Infantry, has been ordered to report to the Army Retiring Board on account of the partial loss of his voice.

A letter from the Army of the Potomac states many of the substitues who had deserted were shot in the several corps towards the close of last week, and prompt and extreme punishment now awaits this class of offenders without a hope of pardon.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.—A little boy had died. His body had been laid out in a darkened room, waiting to be laid in the cold, lone grave. His afflicted mother and bereaved little sister went in to look at the face of the precious sleeper; for his face was beautiful even in death. As they stood gazing on the face of one so beloved and cherished, the little girl asked to shake his hand. The mother at first did not think it best, but the child repeated the request, and seemed very anxious about it; she took the cold, bloodless hand of her dead boy, and placed it in the hand of his weeping sister.

The dear child looked at it a moment, caressed it fondly, and then looked up to her mother, through tears and love, and said—"Mother, this hand never struck me."

What could have been more touching and lovely?

"O, THAT'S ONLY A SOLID SHOT."—A Morris Island letter says: As we marched up the beach, the enemy from James Island threw shell, with most unnecessary care and precision, right at us. They seemed to have the range of the beach perfectly. Now a shell would burst short of us, the next, perhaps would go beyond, and a third explode almost perpendicularly over your head. Occasionally a solid shot would strike near us, with a thud. "Oh, that's nothing but a solid shot," would be the remark. Every one appears on the lookout to save himself, if possible, when shells fall in his vicinity, but let the hissing danger go to the right or left, fall short, or pass over a certain distance from the column, and it is spoken of with contempt, as a thing of the past.

VIOLATION OF GEN. SCHOFIELD'S LATE ORDER.—On Friday last the Union newspaper, a semi-official organ of Gen. Schofield and the conservatives, published an editorial reflecting on Gen. Ewing for disputing the late military order in certain border counties. On Saturday, Captain Price, of the 1st Kansas, made charges and specifications, charging D. M. Griswold, editor of the Union, with a violation of Gen. Schofield's order No. 96, by publishing matter calculated to embarrass the military authorities, and filed them with the Adjutant General, demanding an investigation. Mr. Griswold has not yet been arrested, but as Captain Price is not a man to withdraw charges, it seems as if the organ of the authors of the order is likely to be the first victim.

THE LATEST FROM ROSECRANS.—The National Republican says: The enemy attacked Rosecrans again on Sunday morning at nine o'clock, with overwhelming numbers. The battle raged fiercely all day. According to the latest accounts received here up to two o'clock this afternoon, which left Chattanooga at eight o'clock last evening, two and only two of Gen. Rosecrans' divisions gave way in utter panic and confusion, but from 8,000 to 10,000 of these had been rallied and got back to their places, while the remainder of the army had not given way or retreated, and at the latest moment was driving the advance of the rebel army back.

This we know is the latest news here. The number of killed and wounded on both sides will probably not fall short of 30,000.

IT is reported that the rebel Major-Gen. Marsh Walker was mortally wounded on Sunday, the 6th inst., in a duel with the rebel General Marmaduke, at Bayou Metaire. The difficulty was occasioned by Marmaduke's jealousy of Walker, who had been promoted from the subordinate to the ranking general.

Private advices from Virginia City, Nevada Territory, says additional subscriptions to the amount of $90,000 have been made there for the Sanitary Commission. The money is to be forwarded in silver bricks of about $1,000 each—a good evidence of the mineral resources of that territory, as well as of the liberality of its inhabitants.

The military character of the war is apparently making a radical change. Troops from Richmond have undoubtedly gone to reinforce the West. Richmond must have, therefore, been left to a much diminished army, and the rumors of its evacuation are not without respectability. The policy of the rebels has been to contract their lines of defence, giving up indefensible territory, and protracting the contest by stubborn fights until they provoke recognition. They may be willing to give up Richmond if Rosecrans can be crushed and Gilmore baffled.

IT is again asserted that the Grand Duke Maximillian accepts the Mexican throne. The official Vienna papers represent the matter still undecided. The French pamphlet referred to by the last steamer is said to have been issued at the expense of Enlander, the Confederate loan contractor, to bolster up that speculation. The French ministerial counsels occurred at mart daily. The Bourse is steady at 69f 30c. The Polish question is unchanged. It is rumored that the profered reforms will prove unimportant and unsatisfactory.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.—The steamer Ætna has arrived from Liverpool on the 9th and Queenstown on the 10th, with one day later news. The English papers are canvassing the propriety and non-propriety of the Government detaining the two steam rams built by Laird, supposed to be for the Confederates. A French paper says there are two clipper steamers building at Nantes, and two at Bordeaux, supposed to be for the Confederates. The Paris correspondent of the Morning Herald repeats the assertion that recognition for offensive and defensive league, between the French, Confederate and Mexican Government are decided upon.

GOOD ADVICE.—The Scientific American, in referring to a sad accident caused by riding upon shafts, says: "Don't try to play with machinery, either in motion or when at rest. Forty hair-breadth escapes may result at the forty-first trial in maiming, mutilation or sudden death. Keep the fingers, hands, arms, legs and hair away from rough shafting, and take care that clothing does not get drawn into rapidly-running belts and pulleys." The owners of mills or workshops where machinery is in use, should carefully guard it so that injury can not happen. It does not do to rely always upon the prudence of those who are not liable to injury, and therefore the necessity of making it impossible that they shall be injured.

ROSECRANS AT CHATTANOOGA.—The morning papers contain various speculations relative to the late battles of General Rosecrans, all of which are, however discredited by the last report sent to the press at an early hour this forenoon. Under date of Chattanooga, September 22, the Tribune's special says: The general summing up is, that after two day's severe fighting, in which Gen. Rosecrans, with greatly inferior forces, bore the shock of 140,000 rebels, comprising the armies of Bragg and Johnston, half of Lee's army, and all of Pemberton's scattered troops that could be gathered together, he deemed it prudent to fall back on Chattanooga, which he did in good order.

GEN. GRANT REINFORCING ROSECRANS—There is not a word from Rosecrans' army to-day. The reports here of the rebels in considerable numbers coming into Eastern Kentucky, through Pound Gap, are untrue. Numerous rumors, which it is impossible to authenticate, now prevail.

Gen. Grant is rapidly moving forward to the aid of Rosecrans. That the engagement between Rosecrans' and Bragg's armies is still progressing, &c., the military authorities do not believe, or that any very serious disastrous results have occurred to Rosecrans' army.

Capt. James Black, Assistant Quartermaster in charge of forage, was arrested here to-day, charged with defrauding the Government.

The tobacco market is excited, and prices have largely advanced, on account of the injury to the crops by the frosts of Friday and Saturday nights. No disturbance to the telegraph between here and Chattanooga.

IMPORTANT WASHINGTON ITEMS.—The flag presentation to the Iron Brigade, came off on Thursday last. Mr. Selick presented the flag. Speeches were made by officers and privates.

The movement of the Army of the Potomac has commenced, so far as to send forward Buford's cavalry across the Rapidan. The crossing was effected without opposition. It is supposed that but a feeble force of rebels intervene between Meade and Richmond. Commanders who have doubted the accumulated evidences of any detachments sent from Lee's army Southward, now seem inclined to admit the fact, since the news of the Chattanooga catastrophe. Rosecrans is fighting the whole Southern Confederacy.

A gentleman who left Falmouth a few days ago reports that there was no rebel force in or near Fredericksburg, and but few pickets were to be seen. The same party says there is only one brigade as low down as Germania, on the Rapidan. There is only one squad of rebel troops now north of the Rappahannock and east of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad.

The Herald's Washington special says: Nothing has been talked of or thought of in Washington to-day, except the fate of Rosecrans' army. It is officially ascertained that he has fallen back to Chattanooga to await the arrival of Burnside's forces, which were yesterday within thirty miles, and expected to be up with him to-day, when a forward movement would be promptly made on the lines of the enemy at Pigeon Mountain.

The utmost confidence is felt here upon the junction of Burnside with Rosecrans, and that the enemy would be badly beaten, and compelled to fall back upon Rome or Atlanta.

In the meantime, much solicitude is expressed in regard to the movements of Gen. Meade to take advantage of the depletion of Lee's army in Northern Virginia. A special to the Herald contains an order refusing to allow correspondents with the army to use the telegraph lines for the transmission of dispatches to newspapers. A Herald special, dated Headquarters Army of the Potomac, Sept. 21, says: The army is now being paid off for July and August.

The news received here to-day via Philadelphia, that one hundred and fifty men of a New York cavalry regiment had been captured in an engagement at Raccoon Ford, is utterly false. Our entire loss in killed, wounded and missing, since last Sunday week, has been less than one hundred men, while the lists of rebel prisoners captured during the same time foot up eight commissioned and twelve non-commissioned officers, and over one hundred and thirty privates. The rebels hereabouts discredit the reports that any considerable force of Lee's army has gone to more Southern States.

HOW MRS. BONAPARTE PUTS ON HER CLOTHES.—A Paris correspondent thus gossips about the dresses of the Empress Eugenie. He says it is universally conceded that she is the best dressed lady in Europe. She sets the female fashions for the world; and employs not only modistes but artists to invent them. Her "department of ready made clothing" is something immense. To say that she has a new dress for every day in the year would not begin to convey an idea of the extent and variety of her wardrobe. In the front centre of the ceiling of her Majesty's private dressing-room there is a trap-door opening into a spacious hall above filled with "presses," each containing a dress, exhibited on a frame—looking like an effigy of the Empress herself. In a part of these "presses" there is a little railway leading to the aforesaid trap-door, through which the dress is "descended" into the presence of the Empress. If it pleased her Majesty, the dress is lifted from the frame and placed upon the imperial person; if not, it is whipped up, and another comes down in its place, and not unfrequently another, and another, and other; so fastidious is the taste which gives the law to the world of fashion. In public the Empress never looks over dressed. A severe simplicity always characterizes her toilette, while everything, in material, fit and color, it is as complete in harmony as a Sonata of Beethoves.

DIED:

WILLIAMS—In Freeport, on Sunday evening, Sept. 25th, MARY EMMA, only daughter of Rev. A. G. Williams. D. D., aged six years and three months.

COAL MINING MACHINES WANTED.—The high cost of labor at the coal mines in this State has suggested the necessity of a machine for digging it. A machine that is independent of strikes, military drafts and volunteering for the war would be an invaluable invention.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

☞ Interesting reading matter will be found on the first and fourth pages.

Col. J. B. Clark left to-day for Indianapolis.

From Morris Island.—Among the recent arrivals from Morris Island, we notice the name of Col. Josiah B. Howell, of the 85th Pennsylvania regiment, who was wounded in one of the recent assaults on Fort Wagner.

Postponed.—The gathering of Union men to be had at Mrs. Pack's, corner of Chestnut and Main streets, Allegheny, will take place to-morrow evening. Be on hand, all lovers of freedom.

Notice to the Ladies.—Ladies wishing to assist in making up articles of clothing for the sick and wounded of our Western armies, are requested to call at City Hall this afternoon from three to five o'clock. Material will be furnished to any one willing to make it up.

Heavy Frost.—The past few nights have been decidedly chilly, and overcoats and cheerful fires were in demand. As to the amount of injuries done by the frost we are not informed, but presume, as this is the season for such visitations, it was insignificant.

Venus.—This planet, which a short time ago was to be seen high in the heavens as an evening star, now hides itself almost as soon as the sun, and will shortly make its appearance as a morning star, when many, in order to see beautiful Venus, will be put to no little trouble.

Got a Thrashing.—Last night one of the officers in attendance upon Morris' Minstrels fell upon a lot of boys who were annoying the audience and performers, by making a noise in the stairway, and gave them a severe thrashing. We hope this will teach them a lesson.

Personal.—Rev. J. A. Collins, of Hartstown, Crawford county, Pa. has resigned the pastoral charge of his congregation in that place, on account of failing health. He goes to Minnesota to breathe the pure air of the Far West. Previous to his departure, his congregation presented him with a purse containing $71, as a mark of their appreciation of his labors among them.

Pittsburghers in Philadelphia.—The following Pittsburghers were registered at the various hotels in Philadelphia during Saturday and Sunday: J. Thompson, W. Sawyer, Mrs. Sawyer, S. Sawyer, James Wiley, S. S. Kay, Jas. M. Bailey, Thos. McFadden, Jr., James J. Donnell, Chas. W. Wood, Mrs. W. Bagaley, Ralph Bagaley, A. Frowenfield, S. J. Adams and wife, A. Conkle.

To Clean Canary Birds.—The Scientific American gives the following: These pretty things are, like meaner objects, often covered with lice, and may be effectually relieved of them by placing a clean white cloth over their cage at night. In the morning it will be covered with small red spots, so small as hardly to be seen, except by the aid of a glass; these are the lice, a source of great annoyance to birds.

High Price for Coal.—Coal is now selling at the enormous price of fifty-five cents per bushel, or twelve dollars a cart load, in Louisville. It is now beyond the reach of many poor families. We hope to see the river come up, that coal may find its way into that market, that the price may be reduced. We are credibly informed that there is plenty of it in the boats near this city ready to start down as soon as the river rises.

Passes Refused.—Hereafter, in pursuance to an order of the War Department, no more passes will be issued for admission into the Army Hospital at Chester. Relatives, friends and strangers are alike to be refused admittance. This is a good move, and should long since have been adopted. The hospital is occupied almost exclusively by sick and wounded rebels, and the new order will suspend the operations of the sympathizers who, for some time past, have been so zealous in their attendance.

Leaves for Butler.—Capt. Jason T. Giebner, who has accepted some half dozen appointments to address the people of Butler county, on the issues of the day, will leave this morning to fill his engagements. The friends of Woodward and Lowrie claim that they will carry Butler county, but judging from the enthusiasm and vigor of the friends of the Union we calculate they will be much disappointed on election day. Capt. Giebner will do noble duty in the cause, and we commend him to the kind attention of all Union men.

Appointed State Agent.—Colonel R. Biddle Roberts, of this city, has received the appointment of Pennsylvania State Agent at Washington. In noticing the fact, the Philadelphia Press says: "Mr. Roberts is well known here as an able lawyer, who, at his country's call, relinquished his practice and took to the field in defence of her rights and flag. He was colonel of the 1st Reserves, and participated in several battles. He was formerly a Democrat, but, seeing the necessity of maintaining the principles of true loyalty, he joined the ranks of the Union party, and has thrown all his energies into the work of crushing out this rebellion."

Fire Alarm.—Yesterday afternoon, about two o'clock, as some workmen, engaged in fixing the gas pipes in the old Ark, a building situated in Temperance alley, formerly occupied by the colored people as a church and school, but at present occupied by the Turner Association as a gymnasium, one of them approached with a lighted candle, which ignited the gas, and for a while there was every prospect of an extensive conflagration. The alarm was given, and the fire companies were soon on the spot, but before they reached the ground some one had turned off the gas and extinguished the flames. No damage was done.

Festival of the Social Band.

The Social Band of this city, composed of colored men and women, which is a charitable institution, held a festival last evening at Lafayette Hall, which was largely attended. Appropriate addresses were made by Colonel J. B. Clarke and J. B. Vashon, Esq. A beautiful bible was presented to the Social Band by the Western Star Tabernacle Independent Order of Charity and Love, the presentation speech being made by Mr. Vashon, and the reception by S. A. Neale. The festival continued until a late hour, and was enlivened by music from a brass band.

The Beaver Convention.

The Grand Mass Convention of the Union public to be held at Beaver, on Friday, promises to be one of the grandest gatherings that has ever assembled in the Western part of the State. The distinguished patriots and soldiers who will be present and address the meeting will evidently attract a vast auditory of the masses of the friends of the Union and the Government. By reference to card elsewhere, it will be seen that the Committee of arrangements have used and will exert every effort in their power to contribute to the comfort and convenience of those in attendance. Excursion trains will leave the city and arrive during the day, so that all desiring to attend can have the opportunity.

Abusing Government Horses.—On this subject, Major General Cadwalader, of Philadelphia, has published the following important order:—The attention of the Provost Marshal is directed to the frequent appearance of civilians in the streets and suburbs using horses wearing the United States brand, and also to the fact that soldiers are to be seen daily riding public horses unnecessarily, and frequently at a ruinous speed. He will, therefore, increase his patrols, and instruct them to challenge all such civilians, and learn by what authority they are in possession of public animals, and if the same be not entirely satisfactory, the horse will be seized and immediately turned over to the Post Quartermaster. No enlisted man will be permitted to ride public horses at a faster gait than a walk over the paved streets, unless a more rapid speed be ordered by proper authority, and in writing; nor will officers or non-commissioned officers, in command of detachments of mounted men, whether on duty or not, be suffered to move the same over the pavements at an increased speed, unless they can show an absoluie necessity. For neglecting the spirit of this order, enlisted men will be arrested and severely punished, non-commissioned officers reduced to the ranks, and commissioned officers relieved from duty and tried for disobedience of orders.

Grand Gathering at Turtle Creek.

The friends of the Union and Curtin, at Turtle Creek, had a grand assemblage last Monday night, at which W. N. Moffatt, Esq., presided, assisted by A. Neal, Esq., as Secretary. Upon the opening of the meeting, the talented nephew of the copperhead candidate for Governor, Marcus W. Woodward, Esq., was the first speaker introduced. His speech was filled with the most convincing proof of his uncle'a inconsistency, and he paid a most glowing tribute to the character and proved the patriotism of Andrew G. Curtin.

He was succeeded by Capt. J. F. Geibner, of Camp Copeland, who made a most elegant and appropriate address, against treason and copperheadism. His exhibition of the sympathy of the soldiers of the Potomac for the re-election of Gov. Curtin excited the greatest enthusiasm. The army looked for a recognition of their services in the field from the votes at home, and he was confident there was a sufficiency of loyal men here who would support their representatives in arms.

After remarks from other reputable and patriotic gentlemen, the meeting adjourned with cheers for the Union and Curtin and Agnew.

The Invalid Corps.

Much has been published about this corps, but, as a correspondent suggests, there still remains much unsaid. To Col. J. B. Fry, the Provost Marshal General, are the people of the United States indebted for the establishment of this "Corps of Honor." This branch of the Provost Marshal General's office was established on the 28th of April last, and Col. Richard H Rush, of the 6th Pennsylvania cavalry, its present chief, was ordered to duty on May last. Since that time its organization has been completed in such a manner as to compare favorably with any Bureau attached to the War Department. Already one hundred and forty-six companies have been organized, which average eighty men each, and three hundred and fifty officers have received appointments. There are now on file over one hundred thousand applications for appointments as commissioned officers, yet ungranted, and from the manner in which these appointments are made, most of them will perhaps remain so. Every soldier desiring a commission in this corps must produce certificates from at least three of his regimental, brigade or division commanders, according to his rank, endorsing his general character for intelligence, industry, sobriety and attention to duty. He must also present a certificate of disability of such a nature as to show that he is entitled to an honorable discharge from the service.

For the one great object, of providing for the disabled soldier, for which the Invalid Bureau was created, Colonel Fry deserves the gratitude of the whole nation. By its means the soldier who has given health and risked his life, perhaps shed his best blood in defending his country, is kept from the cold charity of the world, and placed in an honorable position, where he is still usefully employed in serving his country. Some are detached as hospital attendants, others are employed on light duty in garrisons and towns, and everywhere they are assigned to such duties as their actual condition warrants. The light blue uniform is a mark of honor. It is an evidence that its wearer has done his duty in the field, and nine out of ten of the "blue jackets" carries on his person an honorable scar. The time will come when men will be prouder of this uniform than of the Legion of Honor.

Improvements.

Improvements are going ahead rapidly, not only in Pittsburgh, but in Allegheny and the surrounding boroughs. Among other substantial improvements we notice the rebuilding of the burnt district, corner of Short and Water streets; the burnt buildings corner of Front and Water street; the burnt buildings in the Irwin block, on Water near Redoubt alley; besides a number of buildings on Water between Redoubt alley and Short street; a fine block on Second street, near Market. The buildings formerly occupying the above sites were nearly all entirely destroyed, or badly damaged by fire. On Sixth street, and in the neighborhood of the new Penn Central Railroad depot, a number of handsome buildings are in course of erection, or being finished. On St. Clair street, near the bridge a number of handsome iron front buildings, intended for business houses, are in course of erection. In fact, go into whatever part of the city you will, evidences of improvement meet you on every side. Prominent among the many handsome edifices going up in our sister city of Allegheny, we notice several on and near the corner of Water and Federal streets, and the new City Hall in the Diamond. Allegheny has reason to be proud of the taste exhibited by her citizens in the erection of dwellings, business houses and other improvements.

At the passenger depot of the different railroads on Liberty Street, huge masses of stone are lying apparently in inextricable confusion, while from bright morn till dewy eve the busy click of the masons' hammer can be heard transforming those shapeless masses into handsome blocks ready to lay in their places, in building the tunnel of the Pittsburgh and Steubenville road. The tunnel is progressing rapidly, and will be ready for use by the time the road is finished. In fact, the entire interests of Pittsburgh and more aspecially the manufacturing, are in a more prosperous condition now than ever before.

Grand Rally at Wilkins Hall.

The friends of the Union had a grand rally at the headquarters of Union Club No. 1, Wilkins Hall, last night, at which the utmost enthusiasm for the Union and our nominees was displayed. In the absence of the chairman, J. Harrison Sewell, Esq., was called to preside. The Hon. Amos Myers, of Clarion county, was introduced to the crowded assembly, and made a terse, vigorous, and very entertaining speech, which was received with the most vociferous applause. Mr. Myers is doing promising service in the cause of the Union, and his speech last night was one of his happiest efforts. The ball is rolling on.

A First Class Brass Band.

The brass band, led by Mr. Arbogast, and which has its office on Fifth Street, opposite the Postoffice, will soon take rank among the best instrumental bands of the West. Although the company has been together but some two months, the harmony with which they perform and the perfection they have attained is truly remarkable. We should have a first class brass band in this city, and we trust Arbogasts' will receive sufficient encouragement to induce its members to make it such. Mr. Arbogast is a thorough musician, and will spare no means to render his band perfect.

A Reliable Firm.—It gives us pleasure to so designate the firm of Lockhart & Frew, producers and refiners of petroleum. These gentlemen have been long established in the petroleum business, and are proprietors of the Albion Oil Works, Venango county, as well as the Brilliant Oil Works, located at Negley's Run, in this county. By strict attention to business, and their integrity in all transactions, they have built up an extensive foreign and domestic trade, and we are pleased to record their prosperity. They have an office at Nos. 172 and 174 Wood street.

The Present War.

It was thought by many, both in this country and in Europe, that the business of the North would be ruined by the rebellion of the South, and that less than one year from its commencement should witness the utter prostration of the Government, both financially and commercially, but instead of these prophesies proving true, after being engaged in one of the most gigantic wars that the world has ever witnessed, for nearly three years—the credit of the nation is unimpaired, and our commerce is in a most prosperous condition—our manufactories are working to their utmost capacities to fill the demand for their wares—money is plenty, and our citizens are profiting by the evidences of unbounded prosperity. Never in the history of our country has such fine and expensive clothing adorned the forms of our people—in hats, caps and ladies furs is this especially perceptible, and in no establishment in our country is there a better stock to be found than at the extensive and fashionable house of Wm. Fleming, No. 139 Wood street. This house, for years, maintained a wide spread reputation for the extent, variety and beauty—as well as the extremely low prices at which the house always supplied the community with goods in their line. The proprietor has just returned from the East, having with the greatest care selected the largest and best stock of hats, caps and ladies furs ever brought into this market. The public will please bear in mind that Mr. Fleming is a practical hatter, and that a large proportion of his ladies' furs, this season, are of his own manufacture. If you would secure a bargain, call at Fleming's hat store, sign of big hat, No. 139 Wood street.

Important to Voters—Be Assessed.

It behooves every patriot who desires the suppression of the present infamous rebellion and the perpetuity of the Union, to see that he is properly assessed, in order that his right to vote may not be questioned. The friends of Curtin, Agnew and the Union should bear in mind the fact that after Friday, October 2d, they cannot be assessed, and that being forewarned is forearmed. Call on your respective district Assessors, and see that your elective franchise is all right. The law requires that every application for assessment should be made personally, so that it cannot be legally done by proxy. We call on our Union loving friends to see to this fact, and have every thing relative to their right to vote legally and judicially enacted. For the convenience of our readers we append the following list of the Assessors of the county:

"Daily Commercial" Job Printing Office.—Orders for every style of Book and Job printing promptly and neatly executed, from a visiting card up to a mammoth poster. The most rapid and improved steam presses are used in the execution of the work.

Thirsty people fond of something cool and refreshing should call at Faas', Tammany Hall, Allegheny, to-morrow, and get some of his New Jersey lager beer.

Amusements.

THEATRE—CAMILLE FOR THE LAST TIME—In order to make room for several novelties that must be produced during Miss Heron's engagement at the theatre, to-night is the last time that the ever popular sensation drama of Camille can be played. The eminent dramatic star who performs the principal character is well supported by Manager Henderson's company, as we have never seen the piece better cast. For a choice seat call early during the day.

CONCERT HALL.—MORRIS MINSTRELS.—Charley Morris and his Minstrels had another jammed and fashionable audience last night at Concert Hall, and the performance throughout gave the most unqualified satisfaction. As delineators of burnt cork eccentricities, the Morris troupe exceed anything in a similar line that we have seen for some time. Go and hear the Chrystalina Solo by Doll, and the song of the "Old Sexton," by Pease. They alone are worth the money.

Grover & Baker's Sewing Machines, for family and manufacturing purposes, are the best in use. A. F. CHATTONY, General Agent, No. 18 Fifth street.

CHATTANOOGA, September 21, 1:30, A. M.—The battle on the 19th resulted well for us, having held our own as established on the left, and concentrated our forces during the day. Our forces on Saturday morning held a handsome line, with its right on a ridge of hills, and its left protected by rude works of logs thrown up during the night. The left rested on the east side of the Rossville and Lafayette road, about four miles south of Rossville. In the fight of the 19th we had lost about six hundred killed and two thousand wounded, and were ahead three pieces of artillery.

The men were in splendid spirits, and the engagement was resumed at 9 a. m. on the 20th (Sunday), by an attempt of the rebels to storm Thomas' left and front. Several times they were severely repulsed with a heavy loss, and a very little to us. This fight lasted an hour and a half, and was one of the most terrific of the war. Continuous firing of artillery and musketry was kept up with deadly effect during this time. The right and centre was not engaged. Skirmishers were keeping up a halting fire.

On perceiving the withdrawal of skirmishers to the front of the division, moving from the rignt and centre, the enemy made a vigorous attack on that part of the line, piercing the centre, and cutting off Davis and Sheridan from the left, and driving the centre into the mountain; both the right and centre being much scattered, without very serious loss in killed and wounded.

The right and centre gone, Thomas' right became exposed to a most terrific flank attack, and Reynolds and Brannon and the right of Thomas' line was swung around, his extreme left being as the first. This also fell back a short distance on the Rossville road. Parts of the centre were gathered up and reported to Thomas, who made several stands, but were unable to check the rebel advance until the arrival of reinforcements. At one o'clock Gen. Granger, with one division of reserves, came up, and was at once thrown into the centre, driving the enemy handsomely from his position—the strong ridge—and with a heavy loss, the fire from one of Granger's batteries mowing them down. This fight only lasted half an hour or so, with a slight loss to us. We regret to say that Capt. Russell, Granger's Adjutant, was killed ere he had been in the fight ten minutes.

After the bloody repulse the enemy remained until about four o'clock in the afternoon, persisting, however, in maneouvering on both flanks, their full and correct information regarding this country enabling them to do so with great facility. Having gotten again on the flank the enemy made a vigorous attack, and a fight ensued which has no parallel in the history of this army. Col. Brigades of Wood's division, and both Wood and Harker, and Gen. Garfield were present, and the remnent of Johnston's division holding the left, covered themselves with glory, and on the right and center Brannon, Bayard, Reynolds and Ptimer, with parts of their divisions, fought most gallantly, while Steadman and Graham with the reserve drove the enemy at every point where they went in.

At five o'clock p. m. Thomas was still triumphant, and on the left he held his line of the morning, but with night the enemy was back to a line nearly at right angles with that of the morning. Two lines of retreat were open to him to Chattanooga, by one of which he fell back to Rossville during the night. Our losses have necessarily been heavy, but the list of killed will be surprisingly light, and in the two days' engagement we have not suffered more in men than the enemy. In the charge by Thomas, on the first day, the enemy lost as many in killed as we did in the whole day. What were our losses in prisoners and artillery, we cannot say. Our killed will reach 1,200, and our wounded will amount to 7,000, most of them slight wounds.

Among the general officers killed are Gen. Lythe, Col. Keit, Col. King, commanding brigade; Col. Barton, 101st Illinois. Among the wounded are Gen. Morton, of Rosecrans' staff; Col. Croxter, 4th Kentucny; Col. Funkhead, 89th Illinois; Lieut. Col. Madge, 11th Michigan: Lieut. Col. Hant, 4th Kentucky; Col. Bradley, commanding brigade, Sherman's division; Col. Charles Anderson, 6th Ohio; Maj. Wilmen, 12th Kentucky; Lieut. Col. Gripp, 6th Indiana; Lieut. Col. Bryan, 15th Indiana; Col. R. Armstrong, 93d, Maj. Johnston, 22d Illinois; Lieut. Col. Maxwell, 2d Ohio, all slightly; Lieut. Col. Vaughn, 17th Kentucky; Col. Stanley, 180th; Maj. Brown, 68 Ohio; Maj. Dawson, 19th Infanlry, all slight; Gen. Jno. H. King reported wounded and prisoner. We have eaptured Gen. Adams, of Texas, and 1,300 of his men.

The Very Latest.

WASHINGTON, September 22.—According to official dispatches received here, dated as late as five o'clock yesterday, P. M., Gen. Rosecrans had information that Longstreet's corps had reinforced Bragg's, before the battle of Saturday, and it was subsequently stated by deserters from the rebel army that Ewell's corps had also come to his assistance. A telegram was also received here to-day from the officer in command at Chattanooga, which speaks in the most encouraging terms of the general result of the actions of Saturday and Sunday, in which, according to his representations, the EUROPEAN OIL MARKET.

We are indebted to a commercial friend for the Liverpool Circular of Messrs. Boult, English & Brandens:

Petroleum—Without particular activity we have to report a fair demand at very firm prices. Refined for spot delivery is still 2s 5d@2s 6d, some transactions being reported at the latter figure ex store. Speculators are busy in forward contracts, and about 4,000 barrels are reported at 2s 6d, the market closing with an upward tendency. In Crude business is checked by the extreme firmness of holders who have over and over again refused £19 15s, and will not sell at less than £20. Benzine is stronger, and the transactions embrace 900 barrels at from 1s to 1s 3d per gallon. Buyers are still eager, and good quality would now command 1s 4d readily. In Lubricating Grease there are only a few small transactions at £11.

CHICAGO OIL MARKET.—Carbon Oil continues scarce and firm; Linseed Oil steady. We quote: Linseed, raw, $1 15 ℔ gal.; Linseed, boiled $1 20 ℔ gal.; Whale, W. B. $1 10@$1 15 ℔ gal.; Elephant, W. B. $1 15@$1 20 ℔ gal.; Bank Oil $1 10 ℔ gal.; Straits $1 15 ℔ gal.; Carbon Oil, best 70@72c ℔ gal.; Lard Oil, No. 1 winter 90c ℔ gal.; Lard Oil, summer 80c ℔ gal.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA.—The following are the receipts of Flour and Grain at this port: Flour, 1,200 bbls; Wheat, 8,200 bushels; Corn, 2,550 bushels; Oats, 6,200 bushels.

PAYMENT OF THE MILITIA.

GENERAL ORDER NO. 95.

Much delay having unavoidably occurred in the payment of the militia called out by the proclamation of the Governor, and by the authority of the President of the United States, dated September 11, 1862, for the reason that the formalities of muster required by the United States regulations had necessarily been omitted in putting them into service; and a form of roll having been approved by the proper Department at Washington as a sufficient voucher at the Treasury for their payment, captains and officers commanding organizations of troops under the said call will immediately make application to this Department, distinctly stating their post office address, that printed blanks of the approved roll and the proper instructions may be at once furnished.

By order of the Governor,
A. L. RUSSELL,
se11 Adjutant General Pennsylvania.
